

MAGGIE BAR-TURA

Maggie Bar-Tura is an independent consultant, executive coach, and translator of Hebrew literature.

Based in Tel Aviv, Maggie works with non-profits and social change start-ups in Israel and the USA on strategic planning, program design and development, branding, marketing, and communications. She also coaches leaders of nonprofit organizations on issues of vision, leadership, and change management.

Maggie is a former member of the board of directors of the New Israel Fund, and has served as Secretary-General of the Israel Movement for Progressive Judaism. She was Director of Special Projects for the National Kibbutz Movement; and Executive Director of the Carmel Institute for Policy Studies. She was Executive Director of the Commission Management and Budget Office of UJA-Federation of New York, and Chief Operating Officer of the Foundation for Jewish Camp.

Her translations include works by Amos Oz: In the Land of Israel (1983), The Slopes of Lebanon (1989), and The Story Begins (1996). Her most recent collaboration with Amos Oz, "My Curls Have Blown All the Way to China," was published in September 2019 in The New Yorker.